The Rest of the Story!

Armando was born and raised in Guanajuato, Mexico. His father was a surgeon who cared for children in orphanages or who were homeless. Unfortunately, his Dad died at a young age from a work-related illness. Armando's mother was in the United States, so he lived with his grandparents for 17 years.

At the age of 18, Armando received exciting news from his mother. He had finally been granted residency in the United States so, he packed his belongings and headed to Willard, Ohio.

As a child, Armando always wanted to be a business owner; however, he realized that there was no elevator to success, and he had to take the stairs. When he arrived in Willard, he started working in agriculture while trying to learn a new language (English). During the winter, he attended Michigan State University and obtained his GED.

In 2014, he obtained his CDL Class A and drove for a year. The next step on his journey to becoming a business owner was to start a three-year apprenticeship program where he learned the fundamentals of concrete and skills of the trade – how to finish, cure, repair, rectify, and cut concrete and how to read and interpret plans. While commuting to Akron for his apprenticeship, Armando worked with family members in the concrete trade to gain experience.

In 2019, he started his own business which is now known as Reliable Concrete Services. Opening a new business during the COVID-19 pandemic was challenging; however, his faith and family continued to encourage him.

Gabriela stated that in addition to learning a new language, Reliable Concrete Services faced the challenge of the fear the pandemic created in customers not wanting workers to come to their homes and the different regulations in every city with registrations, permits, bonds, certificate of insurance, and income tax.

Owning your own business allows flexibility with family and church activities. The joy of being your own boss, the ability to lead by example, and encourage others to grow in their abilities are additional benefits.

Reliable Concrete Services is a family-owned and operated, faith-based business serving Willard and its communities. Since opening the business, Armando and his crew have transformed the look of homes and earned numerous top-rated service reviews through HomeAdvisor, Angie's List, Facebook, and Google.
